Telephone Charges by Hotels & Motels

Hotels and motels that charge their patrons for local and intrastate (within Colorado) long distance telephone calls are obliged to collect local sales tax on the markup and remit the tax to the City of Loveland Revenue Department. This tax is in addition to any taxes the hotel/motel remits to the telephone utility for line charges or for administrative local or intrastate long distance phone calls. There is no Loveland sales tax on interstate phone calls.

If you are not charging guests for local calls and are only being reimbursed for the cost of intrastate long distance calls, you do not have to report these charges to the City of Loveland Revenue Department.

LONG DISTANCE CALLS

Intrastate (within Colorado)

All intrastate long distance calls are subject to local sales tax, whether the calls are placed by patrons or staff. The entire amount hotels/motels charge their patrons for intrastate long distance telephone calls (including markup) is subject to the tax. Hotels/motels may take a sales tax deduction based on the tax they pay to the long distance carrier for such calls and remit tax on the remainder to the Revenue Department. The total amount on which tax was paid to the long distance carrier should be listed on the back of the 'City of Loveland Sales Tax Return' as an 'Other Deduction.'

Interstate (outside Colorado)

These calls are not subject to local city sales tax.

LOCAL CALLS

No sales tax is due to the City of Loveland if a hotel/motel does not charge its patrons for local calls. However, any charge to the patron is taxable.

Hotels/motels may take a sales tax deduction for monthly line charges. This deduction is limited to the lines dedicated for calls made by customers from their rooms and does not include lines used for calls by sales or administrative staff. If telephone lines are dedicated to room use, a tax deduction can be taken for those lines. If it cannot be determined which lines are dedicated or if lines are not dedicated to a particular use, the deduction can be determined by applying the following formula:

\[
\text{Deduction} = \frac{\text{Number of local calls billed to patrons}}{\text{Total number of local calls made from the hotel/motel}} \times \text{Total line charges paid to the telephone company for local service.}
\]

Divide the number of local calls billed to patrons by the total number of local calls made from the hotel/motel. Then, multiply the result by the total line charges paid to the telephone company for local service.
